Roscoe Ames, Emery H. Chase, Finish Pace Apart in Word Derby

Emery, Counted Out Since Early Sprint, Runs Total to 78 Letters But Auburn Man, in Last Second Show of Speed, Eclipses Mark with 81 — Arlington Smith, 64, is Third

Entrants in the ADVERTISER Big Word Derby flashed around the last lap flinging bigger and bigger words before them and exchanging places with astonishing rapidity. A flying finish by Emery H. Chase, a pace setter in early laps, but who has been counted out in recent weeks, failed by a nose, final honors going to Roscoe Ames, of 135 State street, Auburn, whose 81-letter word flashed to the tape at the last minute to surpass by three letters the seemingly insurmountable mark of 78 set up by Mr. Chase in his closing burst of speed.

In last week's issue Mrs. Margaret Northrup Wilson was announced as showing the way. Leadership then passed to James McGuire, of Jasper, who made good his threat to send in a word which would make those Nutmeg professors dig into their texts. Mr. McGuire's contribution was:

Unhypersymmetricoantiparellelepipedicalisationalographically.

The word is defined as "in such a manner as to explain by the drawing of a figure in enlarged proportions. A day or two later Mr. Chase drew abreast with a 60-letter word and early this week drew far in the lead with his 78-letter contribution, which looked like a sure winner during the ensuing forty-eight hours. Then from a reader of the WOODHULL SENTINEL, Roscoe Ames, who credits the authenticity of the word submitted by him to Robert (Believe-It-Or-Not) Ripley, came the 81-letter word which eclipsed even the contribution of Mr. Chase.

Third place honors go to Arlington Smith, former Addison boy and correspondent for the ADVERTISER, of Elsmere, N. Y. Mr. McGuire has been tied for fourth by "A Rathboneite" and by Eleanor Ten-Broeck of Woodhull, each of whom in their quest for the ultimate in bigger and bigger words fell upon the same identical word submitted by Mr. McGuire.

Follow now the staccato beat of big word hoofs as they go tearing around edging for the inner track.

Big Word Derby
Addison Advertiser
Gentlemen:

A big word—60 letters, beat it if you can!

"Tetramethylparatolyltriamidoethoxytriphenylcarbinolsulphonic"—acid (used as an adjective).

Now Mr. Advertiser Man
Of the famous big-word derby plan
Let us at once proceed to see
Just what its status seems to be!

The first word which appeared in this
Contained of letters thirty-six;
Then other words came crashing in,
Each sender with intent to win.

Longer still these words accrued
In polysyllabic magnitude!
'Twas thought the end was nearly reached
When suddenly came the Welsh to meet.

These Welsh words almost "get my goat"
They make you cough to clear your throat—
But everything "goes" in a time like this
In the search for long words not to miss.

But be darn! B'gosh! Do something quick
Is what I must! or lose the trick!
So here's a word to you from me—
A monstrous one I think you'll see.

Its sixty letters stand out bold
To challenge all within the fold.
It's called by chemists "7-B"
Or"Methyl Violet" as you see.

I cannot put this word in rhyme
Because it takes two printed lines.
It's used to stain germs of disease
A violet powder, if you please!

This is the longest word I find
In all the science books of mine,
But what should one expect to do
With all these long words, I pray you?

Well here's a use that perhaps could
Be made to do a little good—
When someone tries to talk to you
In language strange like "parlez vous"—

Just hand him a long word or two—
You've got him stopped! He's done! He's thru!
At once he'll know he's never heard
Such awful, awful, awful words!

Emery H. Chase

P.S.—
Information came that the genuineness of these long words is being questioned by some who regard them only as fakes or "make-ups".

"Electric" Fence Heads Cattle and Trespassers Also

R. F. Ingersoll is trying out a new type of fence which is proving quite effective. He has placed an electrically charged fence around his pasture, only one wire is needed as this ingenious device is charged with a current of 90 volts which is sufficient persuasion to prevent the stock from straying and trespassers are also willing to stay outside, since contact with the charged wire produces a slight shock.

Mr. Ingersoll figures the cost of the fence to be less than the usual three or four strand wire for the amount of electricity used is slight.

The Ingersoll farm is located on the Woodhull-Jasper highway.

What's The Difference 'Tween Chain Letters and Code Letters?" Perplexed Man Wants to Know

The following letter taken recently from the New York Herald-Tribune, exemplifies the complexity of mind many a citizen finds himself in these days. He is warned against various "rackets" yet inflicted with government "rackets" just as unreasonable as those impised by the racketeer. Ed's note.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—When Postmaster General James A. Farley went to work this morning, he should have found, if his postal service is functioning properly, a letter from M. S. Glenn, of Mountain Grove, Mo. Mountain Grove is a town of some 2,212 persons, but it's not too small to escape the effects of the dime chain letter craze, and that's what inspired Glenn's letter.

Glenn, who describes himself as "writer-publisher-free lance critic," sent a copy of his letter to the United Press. Here is it:

"Dear Mr. Farley:

"I am a country printer. Used to think I was pretty smart. But am up against a problem today that is bothering me quite a bit.

"Have a letter from a friend asking me to help him get off the relief roll, by helping others do the same thing. It seems that I can do this by sending a dime to a certain party named in his letter, and permitting others in turn to eventually favor me in the same way.

"I am told, however, that the government says it's wrong to thus use the mails in making and asking donations; but a very officious-talking representative of this same government has also written me, thru the mails, for a donation of $5, to help him keep a code "racket" going that has already put me and my little business where I now actually need a donation myself—and while its not a postal violation to mail him this $5, I am threatened, thru him, with government prosecution if I don't mail it.

"I find that the party writing me for this $5 code donation gets his letters thru the mails, both ways, without paying the Postal Department any postage whatever—while the other proposition, calling for only a dime, will help the government out 18 cents.

"I also find that if some poor devil should actually receive a chain's full run of 15,625 dimes, the Postal Department, at 3 cents each, would get exactly $468.75 out of that one deal.

"Next find that if only 5,000 of these chains should run their full course the government will get $2,340,550 out of the deal, in addition to what it would do for envelope and stationery factories, jobbers, retailers, printers of form letters, typists, increased employment of mail sorters, carriers, truckers, railway postal helpers, government stamp printing, etc.

"But what to do I sure don't know.

"If I don't spend $5 to help support a deal that is killing little business all over the country, I will be arrested and sent to jail—and if I spend 28 cents to help the Postal Department pay its way through this year without a deficit I may be arrested for that—and finally, if I try to avoid both of the jail counts by donating $5 I will go crazy trying to raise the $5 and be sent to the bughouse!

"What a life—what a life!

"Sincerely yours,

"MICHAEL S. GLENN"

Washington Snapshots

by JAMES PRESTON

Figuring suddenly in the Washington picture is a new assertion of the State's Rights doctrine, booming up from the South and finding expression by Democratic Senators. Under the surface this issue has been stirring for some time with the constant prodding of Senators Byrd and Glass of Virginia. But the real climax came with the effort of Senators Wagner and Costigan to push through a Federal anti-lynching bill. To what extent this growing consciousness of state's rights will figure in consideration of pending legislation which would permit the Federal officials to encroach further upon local dominions is a matter of question. Many believe that the veteran far-horse, Senator Borah, is prepared to lead a vigorous fight against further invasions.

If the sentiment grows to abide by constitutional limitations, the Wagner Labor Disputes bill to permit the government to control all local labor relations, extension of the NIRA, the so-called Social Security bill and others will be affected.

Warning that printing press inflation would be fatal, President Roosevelt went before a joint session of the House and Senate yesterday to deliver his veto of the Patman Bill. The chief executive told Congress this bonus legislation would "invite an ultimate reckoning in uncontrollable prices and in the destruction of the value of savings." It is expected the House will over-ride the President's veto and the Senate will uphold him, if at all, by the narrowest of margins.

Plans Announced For Steuben Camporee To Be Held at Hornell

Hon. Leon F. Wheatley is Chairman of Advisory Committee—Sponsored by Hornell Chamber of Commerce—Troops Camping 50% or More of Membership Will Qualify for Award—Program Complete for Each of Three Days.

Plans and programs for the camporee of Steuben Council, Boy Scouts of America, to be held in Hornell May 31, June 1 and 2 have been announced by the council officials as follows:

THE CAMPOREE: The Council offers this fifth camporee to promote troop camping and to give all scouts an overnight camping experience. The camporee is intended for troops to demonstrate their ability to camp on their own, under boy leaders. There is no competition between troops but all troops "try to beat par" by testing their performance against standards of proficiency—as set forth in this announcement. The camporee is a boys activity. Patrols are under the leadership of patrol leaders and the several patrols of a troop are under the leadership of a senior patrol leader. The Scoutmaster is the executive officer of the troop and is responsible for its general supervision. All rating is based on the boy leaders' performance. The Scoutmaster is a member of the Camporee staff which determines all troop ratings. Instructions are for the troop staff.

THE SPONSORS: The Chamber of Commerce will provide fire-wood, lights, water, garbage disposal, refrigeration for perishables. Entertainment will include informal ball games, a ten-cent movie at the Majestic, and a ten-cent swim at the Y. M. C. A. The hosts will afford police protection. All of these favors are provided without expense to the scout council. Troops and scouts are requested to patronize the local stores. Groceries, milk, bread and meats will be sold on the grounds.

NEEDED—A GARDEN CLUB

Why do some cities and villages always present a handsome, tidy, well-kept appearance while others look down-at-the-heel or unkempt? Is it because some communities are blessed with better natural advantages, or because their citizens are awake to cultivate what advantages they have?

Unquestionably it is the attitude of the citizens of a community which determines above all else what kind of an appearing place it will become. And that attitude may be summed in the two words; civic pride. Civic pride is not gauged by social rank, wealth or the size of the house one lives in, rather it is a condition of mind which drives an individual or community to improvement of what is had.

A community poor financially may still possess richness of civic pride that is shown by well kept lawns, neat parks and tasteful plantings of inexpensive flowers and shrubs that are cared for in an intelligent manner. Such a community has the faculty of teaching its children to respect the property rights of others, instead of ruthlessly snatching flowers which someone has raised with expenditures of time infinitely more costly than money. Once that civic pride is fully developed such a community is marked by every person passing through.

There are various ways of planting civic pride in a community, every one of which must be combined with the virtue of persistence. Garden clubs will arouse keener interest in both home grounds and public places, providing an excellent vehicle for conveying united demand landscaping mistakes be avoided as well as improvements be instituted. Proper instruction of boy scouts and girl scouts can wield a fine influence among the younger generation, bringing to young people an appreciation of Nature which will provide a bulwark of safety from vandalism by thoughtless fingers.

While this community shows more evidence of civic pride than many visited by the traveling public, there is still room for improvement. The stream banks at certain points are nothing but dumps, when they could be spots of more than passing beauty; parks look far from as attractive as one might expect; some children are uneducated in the love of flowers growing where they were planted, and snatch blossoms to destroy the beauty of certain plants for one or two years to come.

It costs so little in money to make a community one which shows civic pride in every street, what a pity no one will take the initiative to enhance our natural, God-given beauty with more care to make this village a beauty spot for all to enjoy. What Addison needs is a garden club to cement its residents together with a common desire for public and private beautification to create a community of keen civic pride.

POSTERITY'S BURDEN

In a recent magazine article the doughty General Johnson voices the opinion we must stop the spree of spending on which we are launched, if our Democratic form of government is to continue. He assumes the position our sons and daughters upon whom the great burden of debt is being piled for payment in the future, will not consent to becoming draft animals for too great a load.

During the course of the article General Johnson embraces the opportunity to ridicule the inflationary theories of both Father Coughlin and Senator Long, as leading eventually to printing press repudiation of all debt. Yet, in spite of his own and frequent criticism of that old ogre, Johnson still professes to believe in the New Deal.

All in all it is impossible to put one's finger upon the General's belief at this time. He says we are headed for destruction unless we call a halt to spending, but does not back up the words with any demand that we should "halt" before it is too late. He admits NRA is all but done for, yet clings to the basic idea in spite of the fact so able an executive as himself could not make it succeed.

That is the trouble with the country today. We were embarking an a series of the most radical experiments ever attempted in this country with the promise they should be dropped if not successful. They have not been successful over a national area. True, certain individuals have benefited by the great government hand-outs, that have served on the whole to put the entire country in worse shape than it was before. The rank and file of citizens have not benefited and continued suffering from depression has pulled us all steadily downward, together. The Administration knowing it must stand or fall upon the results of these hapless experiments, refuses to admit failure. There is still the big five billion relief fund and that is the greatest campaign melon any political party ever dreamed of controlling.

Though he draws no definite conclusions one may put their finger on, Johnson does hint at a fact Americans should keep constantly in mind in resisting further raids upon the public treasury. We who incur these obligations are not the ones who will pay them off! We are preparing to bequeath that burden for the necks of the next generation and generations yet unborn. Taxes for national government in this country were negligible for the first 150 years of its existence—from now on they will be staggering.

The question to present itself to an analytical mind is this: "Are we justified to continue experiments that pile enormous debts upon the backs of a generation in no ways responsible for what mistakes we make?" True we should not let anyone starve. But when the money we spend for government must be paid by others than ourselves, we should determine not to make that burden any heavier than possible. The REAL Forgotten Man is going to be Posterity.

WE MUST DECIDE

The old law of supply and demand is as inexorable as the tides of the sea. It has operated faithfully down through the centuries since the dawn of civilization. It is the answer to the question of the intrinsic value of gold, of precious stones, of rare paintings, for the demand for those things has always exceeded the available supply.

That is why the problems of our domestic and foreign commerce cannot be solved by the evolutions of the New Deal, even though the ideal might be desirable. They are world problems affected constantly by world conditions and must be met, if met at all, by people with world-wide visions. No American system of curtailed production or gospel of scarcity will regain us our place in the commercial sun from which we have taken such a ridiculous tumble in the past two years.

One of the glaring examples of what can happen to basic American commodities is the tale of cotton. For years the acreage of U. S. cotton has been approximately one-half of the world acreage. Secretary Wallace started the New Deal policy of plowing under cotton and pegging the price to 12 cents a pound. Hand in hand with this movement came the NRA with its various codes and restrictions to compel American manufacturers to boost the price of all cotton fabrics produced here. The results have become the most perfect example on record of how government manipulations can ruin domestic commerce.

In the first place cotton growers in Brazil, Egypt the Sudan and India were not slow to realize the New Deal gospel of scarcity was their opportunity to gain a long sought advantage in the world cotton markets. While Americans pegged their price far above the world price our competitors promptly started raising more cotton to take the world market away from us. Japan, eagerly entered the South American market to buy cotton and flooded the countries south of us with cheap Japanese goods.

Nor was that all. Japan, hungry for commercial advantages in every part of the world increased her exports to America by leaps and bounds. NRA was a made-to-order arrangement for the sons and daughters of Nippon. Ridiculously cheap labor, cheap raw materials and high American prices have enabled the Japs to bring more and more manufactured cotton goods into this country. The Japs sold seven times as many yards of cotton goods to us in 1934 as they did in 1930. And during January and February of this year they sold more yards of cotton bleached goods here than in the entire year of 1934. Is this a menace to American industry and labor?

President Roosevelt evidently pooh, poohs the idea. When textile manufacturers of the country presented the matter to him seeking relief from cotton processing taxes Mr. Roosevelt answered that Japanese shipments to this country last year were only a small fraction of our total supply. This is doubtless true, but the affect of those importations is depressing far beyond the present total extent of the goods.

The presence in our stores and wholesale markets of Japanese goods priced dirt cheap has the affect of greatly cheapening American goods of the same kind. People still look at price and when something unbelievably cheap is flashed before them they forget both quality and the fact higher priced American labor and raw cotton is responsible for the difference. The psychological fact depresses the market for American goods and defeats every heralded advantage of the New Deal.

All of which will eventually force us to answer the questions still confronting us: Shall we forsake the gospel of scarcity, throw off labor restructions and set free American industry and agriculture to meet world competition? Or, shall we build high enough tariff walls to be self-contained, and forget world markets? We must decide between these courses.

IRONY

When Senator Bronson Cutting crashed in a plane accident a couple of weeks ago one of the colorful figures of the country was snuffed out. In 1932 Senator Cutting and Franklin Roosevelt formed an alliance which helped the latter into the White House. In 1934 the brief alliance had been broken, the two had drifted wide apart on many policies, and in the fall campaign President Roosevelt, to quote a contemporary writer, "was at Bronson Cutting's political throat."

For the most part Boss Farley was not allowed to fight the liberals and progressives of other parties in the 1934 campaign. A striking exception was Bronson Cutting, the Democrats waging a militant fight to elect Dennis Chavez to his seat in the Senate. Cutting won by 1,284 votes out of 150,000 but Farley's lieutenants contested the election. It was while returning to the capital from fighting the contest for his seat that Senator Cutting fell to his untimely death.

The irony of the whole affair is contained in the fact Dennis Chavez was appointed by the Governor of New Mexico as Senator to finish the term of the man the Administration had vainly tried to unseat.

complain that they cannot find homes. With the enactment of the relief appropriation and the setting up of the new divisions to administer it, there was a new influx with one F Street building being pressed into service to receive job applications. A recent compilation by the Civil Service Commission shows 989 persons in the New Deal drawing $10,000 a year salary or more, and 7,223 receving $5,000 to $10,000.

Of wide significance is the survey made by the United States News, edited by David Lawrence, of editorial opinion on President Roosevelt's last radio address. The News said:

"President Roosevelt's radio fireside talk, advocating continuance of New Deal policies, with additional legislation affecting business and banking, created a sharp division of opinion among the editors who commented, with sentiments divided in these propositions:

"In favor of the President's proposition, 37 per cent of the editorial opinion; opposed to his proposition, 63 per cent.

"Business protest against restrictions imposed by the Federal Government is reflected in the majority comment."

The New York Times said: "Of this much we may be sure: that, at some point, discovery of the fact that Washington is itself standing in the way of normal business recovery is bound to influence even the political point of view."

This survey indicates that no longer is the country taking the attitude that "the Administration can do no wrong", but is weighing each move as to its effect upon the national welfare. A thinking electorate, rather than one blindly following, is a nation's most valuable resource.

The Secret Battle

By WALTER LIPPMANN

SOMEBODY once asked Arnold Bennett what he thought of the reviews of his latest books. He replied that he had not read them, but that he had measured them, and that their length was quite satisfactory. Applying the same method of criticism to Secretary Morgenthau's radio address, it may be said that it covers fifty-eight inches of newspaper print; that fifty-two inches are devoted to an inadequate, oversimplified and partisan history of past events which might better have been omitted entirely, and that six inches deal with international stabilization and are interesting and important.

Former Secretary Mills has punctured the fallacy of the historical part of the address. It attacks the Hoover Administration for not going off the gold standard in the winter of 1932. The event showed, I believe, that it would have been wise to do this, to recognize that when Britain and the countries of the sterling bloc abandoned gold, the existing international gold standard was wrecked, and that any country, like the United States, Germany or France which stood by it was doomed to suffer a terrible deflation. There were a few who said this in 1932. If Mr. Roosevelt was one of them he did not announce his opinion, and, therefore, neither he nor any member of his Administration is entitled to attack Mr. Hoover for not having had the foresight of their hindsight.

The truth of the matter, I believe, is that we fought to stay on gold in 1932 because almost every responsible person in both parties felt in honor bound, quixotically perhaps, but none the less genuinely, to make every honest effort to maintain the gold parity. The British had held out till their gold reserves were exhausted; we held out till our economy was prostrated by the effort to deflate. The hypercritical may say that Britain could have staid on if Britain had been willing to face the ordeal of reducing wages and interest and other fixed costs; they may say we could have staid on by paying out more gold and liquidating still more drastically than we did wages, interest, and the capital structure of banks, insurance companies, railroads, industrial corporations, farms and local governments. But the reasonable and charitable judgment on both nations is that they endured just about all that their people could endure before seeking the relief of depreciating their currency.

But when everything of this sort has been said, who knows what the verdict of history will be? The record has been made, and neither Mr. Morgenthau's effort to condemn it for the Democrats nor Mr. Mills's attempt to justify it for the Republicans will alter in the slightest degree the irrevocable past.

In regard to that portion of the address which was devoted to stabilization, the best as well as the worst that can be said is that it matches Mr. Neville Chamberlain's statements on the same subject. The official British opinion is that stabilization must wait until the British government feels that the dollar and the franc are in a relation with sterling which suits the British view of the British interest. The official American opinion is that the American government is prepared to stabilize on conditions which suit the American view of the American interest. We think those conditions now exist as respects sterling and the dollar, and we should be glad to stabilize at approximately the old rate of exchange. The British do not think those conditions now exist and do not wish to stabilize now.

We shall come no nearer to agreement by indulging in moral recrimination across the Atlantic. The two countries are in the same moral position. We tried to get the British to stabilize at the end of 1932 and early in 1933. We were rebuffed. The British tried to get us to stabilize in June, 1933, and they were rebuffed. We have been trying to get the British to stabilize for some months now, and we are being rebuffed. When one country has been ready, the other has not, and so for three years the monetary disorder has continued.

One of the unpleasantest aspects of the matter is that neither government believes what the other says officially. For both know that the whole thing is an elaborate maneuver in which there is no complete disclosure of all the facts by either government. Both currencies are being manipulated by huge secret funds. The secrecy may be necessary, but it creates intense suspicion. There has never been any true accounting of what the British Equalization Fund or the American Stabilization Fund have done, are doing, or are intending to do. The Americans see that the price of gold in sterling has been rising steadily for more than three years and they have been allowed to learn that the British fund has made a profit. They conclude, perhaps wrongly but naturally, that Britain is deliberately depressing the pound by selling it short. They resent it because, as sterling depreciates, it presses on the American level. The British have seen, first, our raising of the price of gold, and more recently our raising of the price of silver. Nobody has ever explained the silver policy and yet it is making a lot of trouble for British interests in China and threatening to make worse trouble in India.

There are, consequently, Americans who firmly believe that the British Equalization Fund is a sinister agency, and there are Britons who believe that our monetary actions are irresponsible lunacy.

Possible Inflation

By MARK SULLIVAN

THE country is passing through another period in which thought about possible inflation is conspicuous in newspapers and market places. By possible "inflation," as the word is used here, is meant an extravagant rise in prices, whether due to fiat currency or to a great and sudden expansion of credit.

The present flare-up about inflation goes farther than the one which arose about November, 1933, but not so far as the first, which blazed up about the time the country went off the gold standard in April and June, 1933.

In any outburst of attention upon possible inflation, and in inflation itself, a material element is mass psychology. Granted the right conditions —and many of these conditions exist —the expectation of inflation, if widespread enough, creates the thing expected. The present thought about possible inflation includes the element of psychology to a greater degree than in the previous periods.

Partly as cause and partly as effect, at least four incidents have contributed to the psychological part of the present wave. Three important public officials, governor of the Federal Reserve Eccles, chairman of R. F. C. Jones and Senator McAdoo, who was formerly Democratic Secretary of the Treasury, have all spoken of the Patman bonus bill, which would be direct inflation of the currency, as a thing that would do no great harm. Such expressions reflect a spirit of tolerance of inflation in those who make the statements and have a tendency to give rise to inflationary psychology among those who read them.

The sum of many contributing factors is put in words by a fiscal authority of high standing, Dr. E. W. Kemmerer, of Princeton, who, testifying before a Senate committee, said that with respect to inflation America is "on the brink of a volcano." The meaning is that the country is in danger of widespread apprehension that the purchasing power of the dollar may fall seriously, leading people to get rid of dollars by using them to buy goods and stocks, and leading thus to a rapid and violent rise in prices to extreme heights, which would be inflation.

For any one to say, under these circumstances, that inflation is not likely, would be very rash. The truth is that the forces making for inflation are stronger than the forces operating to hold it in check.

Yet there are forces and conditions which tend to avert inflation. One is the possibility, suggested by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, that the nations of the world may get together and agree upon a stable relation of their respective currencies. Such a stabilization would not only minimize the dangers of inflation in America and elsewhere. It would be taken toward remaking a normal and orderly world.

The question now is whether anything will be done in response to Secretary Morgenthau's gesture of willingness to stabilize. If progress is made in the reasonably near future, we shall probably avert not only inflation but other dangers equally serious. But, if, after Mr. Morgenthau's gesture, nothing is done, the world after a little while will be apt to conclude that stabilization is impossible or far distant. If that state of mind should arise throughout the world, the consequences might be serious. One consequence would be to increase the likelihood of inflation in America.

The present situation about stabilization of currencies is much like that preceding the World War. Competitive reduction of the values of currencies is indeed a kind of war, a war of prices. In July, 1914, as now, the statesmen of each country practically all believed that war was imminent and that it should be averted. But then, as now, they were unable to come to the agreements that would avert war.

There is in America another possible condition that would work against inflation. N. R. A. expires June 16. If it should not be renewed, prices of manufactured goods would tend to go on a competitive basis. Even if, as now seems probable, N. R. A. should be renewed with all "intrastate" business exempted, the same result, competitive prices, would be likely to follow, for a much larger proportion of business is "intrastate" than is commonly supposed.

N. R. A. as it exists is largely a price-maintaining or price-raising institution, both as respects manufactured goods and wage rates. With N. R. A. suspended, or with intrastate business exempted from N. R. A., nominal wage rates would be likely to go down, though real wages in the form of purchasing power would not. If a general tendency toward lower prices and wages were brought about by suspension of N. R. A., there would be less reason for the high prices of farm crops maintained by triple A, and that, too, might go over the dam.

In short, there is at least a possibility of the crumbling of the whole structure of Mr. Roosevelt's "planned economy," with the result that prices of everything will seek their natural relation to each other. There is a school which believes strongly that this condition would be the basis of a true and prolonged prosperity. Planned economy has definitely lost favor both in Congress and in the country. Even a breach in the structure of N. R. A. would be a force working against inflation in the sense of a violent rise in prices to extreme heights.

Tour of Republican Chairman Shows Revitalized Party Strength

With a view of surveying Republican strength in each of the sixty-two counties in the State, and directed at revitalizing the party in doubtful counties, Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton, accompanied by Assemblyman Irving M. Ives, minority leader of the Assembly, has begun his tour, making Rochester on Tuesday his first port of call.

Following conference with Thomas E. Broderick, Chairman of Monroe County, and his associates, Mr. Eaton proceeded to Buffalo, spending Wednesday and Thursday in Erie County, contacting with County Chairman William J. Hickey, Assemblyman Schwartz, Erlich and Piper, and Senator Nelson W. Cheney of the 50th Senatorial District.

Friday found the State Chairman in Niagara County, meeting with County Chairman Glen R. Bedenkapp and other Republican stalwarts. On Saturday he is scheduled to be in Orleans County to meet with County Chairman Herbert T. Reed and Assemblyman John S. Thompson.

Leaving Orleans County, Mr. Eaton is scheduled to arrive in Syracuse Sunday where, with Chase Mellen, Jr., Republican leader in New York County, he will address a meeting of the Columbian Republican League of New York State at 11 A. M., at the Hotel Syracuse. Following his address, Mr. Eaton will return to Norwich to plan further details of his tour.

Executive Committee Meets May 28

Pursuant to instructions from the State Chairman, Colonel Lafayette B. Gleason, Secretary of the Republican State Committee, has issued a call for a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee, to be held at a luncheon at 1 P. M., Daylight S ving Time, May 28, in the National Republican Club, 54 W. 40th St., New York City. Matters of policy will be discussed at this meeting and the various subcommittees of the State Committee will make reports.

Ives Radio Speech Distributed

So many demands were made upon state headquarters for copies of the address of Assemblyman Ives, made over a state-wide hook-up via Station WGY on the evening of May 12th, that Chairman Eaton directed the speech to be printed and given wide distribution. The thirty-minute talk of the Minority Leader of the Assembly was in reply to an initial broadcast by Gov. Lehman in which he sought to justify the Democratic legislative record in Albany this year. Mr. Ives, in his rebuttal, unleashed a blistering attack upon the Governor's statements and sharply dsputed Democratic claims as to the origin of much of the legislation passed. He alleged the Democrats had appropriated many Republican bills for their own and, after listing the Republican program in detail, scored "Control of the Democratic majority by Postmaster General Farley and the White House."

G. O. P. Chiefs to Address Young Republicans

The annual convention of the Association of New York State Young Republican Clubs, to be held at Alexanderia Bay on June 21 to 23 inclusive, will be featured by addresses from John Hamilton, aide to National Chairman Henry P. Fletcher; George Olmstead, Chairman of the Young Republican National Committee; State Chairman Eaton and Harold Johnson, publisher of the Watertown Daily Times, it was announced today by George Sibley, President of the Association. The nominating committee met on May 11th in Albany and drew up its slate of officers for the ensuing year. The list of nominees will not be made public until the convention, Mr. Sibley made known.

Educational League Meetings

Continuing its intensive drive among the women of the State, the Republican Educational League, Inc., under the leadership of Mrs. T. Channing Moore, has arranged for additional meetings late this month throughout the northern part of the state. The first of these "Political Schools" was held at Fort Ticonderoga Wednesday and subsequent meetings at Ogdensburg Thursday, Watertown Friday and at Pulaski and Owego on Saturday. Meetings will also be held in Niagara Falls and at Cazenovia Tuesday. Earlier in the month the League staged a series of "Schools" through the Southern Tier and in Rockland and Sullivan Counties.

The action of Governor Lehman in approving the Tioga County ripper bill, directed at abolishing the office of Supervisor in the Village of Owego, has created widespread indignation in the county against "this palpable interference with every known principle of home rule." The enactment into law of the bill will result in additional litigation over the controversial post, it was declared by Stephen M. Lounsberry, Republican County Chairman, in that the position has been used as a target for the Democratic Party in the County for a number of years, and has been the subject of a number of court decisions.

As a result of approval of the Tioga County bill, residents of Nassau County, at which some sixteen ripper bills were aimed during the legislative session, have redoubled their petitions to the Governor against his signing these bills. Some 40,000 protests against the bills were received in Albany, it was declared at the Capitol.

Annual Meeting of New York Young Republicans Scheduled For June 21

George H. Sibley, Association President, Declines to Serve Again and Successor Will Be Chosen at June Meeting—Several National Figures Have Accepted Invitations to Be Present.

Plans have been completed and invitations issued for the third annual meeting and convention of the Association of New York State Young Republican Clubs, to be held at Alexandria Bay June 21-22-23. George H. Sibley of New York City, president of the Association, and Clarence Burtch of Alexandria Bay, chairman of the arrangements committee, have announced that about one thousand members are expected to attend.

Interest in the meeting lies in its underlying political significance, insofar as the G. O. P. in the Empire State is concerned. The crux is the election of a new president. Mr. Sibley, former president of the New York (County) Young Republican Club, and leader of the liberal younger wing of the party, has refused to serve again and has advocated the choice of some upstate member who has demonstrated his abilities within the Association. His successor will be chosen by the nominating committee which meets in mid-May. It is expected that the political complexion of the successful candidate for the office will have much to do with the trend of the association and its participation in the already heralded G. O. P. campaign to win the Assembly next year and the Governor's office in 1936 Under Mr. Sibley's administration, the Association has been noted for its independence of the "Old Guard Reactionaries", its solidarity of action and strong unity of purpose.

The 1934 annual meeting, held in White Plains, was marked by the adoption of a declaration of purpose and principles for the Young Republicans which was hailed as a landmark in State politics. Several of its salient features were accepted by the state leader and incorporated in the party platform adopted last fall at the Rochester Convention. The 1934 meeting saw such diverse G. O. P. figures as Ogden L. Mills, W. Kingsland Macy, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Chase Mellen, Jr., former Congressman Davenport, Col. Wm. J. Donovan and Mrs. George A. Wyeth, among the featured speakers. The identity of the senior party figures who will be asked to present their views to representatives of 18,000 Young Republicans this year has not yet been announced. It is known that several national figures have accepted invitations, including State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton of New York; John Hamilton, National Committeeman from Kansas, the newly appointed Washington associate of National Chairman Henry P. Fletcher; and George Olmsted of Des Moines, Ia., Chairman of the National Young Republican Committee.

Delegations of Young Republicans from the northern counties of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and from New England States, as well as the far West, have indicated their desire to be present.

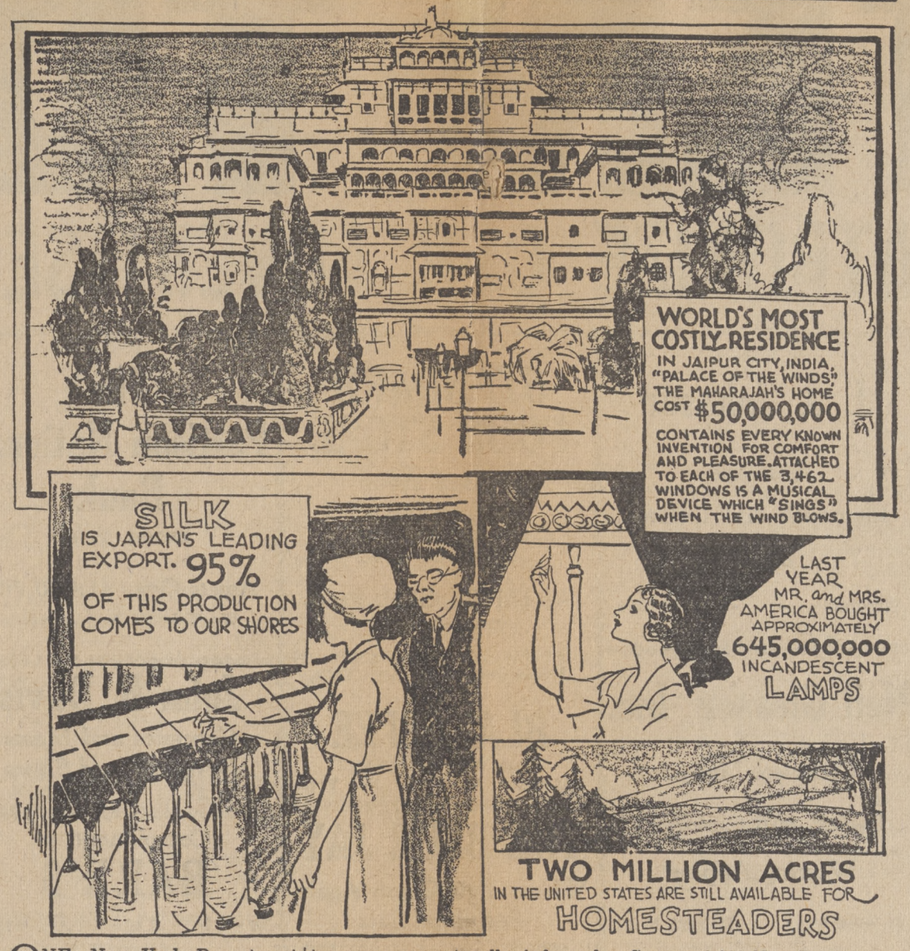
THIS BUSINESS WORLD

by Robert K. Doran



ONE New York Department Store recently executed a neat stroke of business by promoting monogramming. This store advertised its new service in connection with a wide range of products. Among the items included in the "monogramming list" were aluminum ware, shower curtains, bath mats, hampers, liquor sets, cocktail shakers, towels and linens.

A tremendous wave of interest on the part of customers was put in motion. Sales of these various items increased tremendously and best of all, the plan eliminated absolutely the evil of returned goods. When placing an order for a monogrammed item customers were naturally informed that no purchase could be returned. This was done more as a matter of form. No customer expects to return a monogrammed item!

The property described herein being a part of the residuary estate of Nicholas S. Mundy whose will was probated in Chemung County October 29th, 1894, and recorded in Chemung Co. Surrogate's Office in Volume 14 of Wills at page 713, and also recorded in the Steuben County Clerk's Office in Volume 332 of Deeds, at page 293, said residuary estate having been willed to Catherine Hughson and Louisa Owen; Catherine Hughson having died leaving a will devising all her property to two grandchildren. Frederick W. Hughson and Louise Hughson Way, party of the first part herein; Louise Owen having died leaving a will devising her residuary estate, including the above described property, to Louise Hughson Way, party of the first part herein, Frederick Hughson having died leaving a will devising properties, including the property herein described, to his three children Simeon M., Mary F., and Herbert B. Hughson by deed dated January 31st, 1900, and recorded in Steuben County Clerk's office in Volume 262 of deeds at page 426, in which deed the property was erroneously described as bounded on the north by the Chemung Canal Feeder "and" on the south by lands of Edwin Meeks" when the description should have been "on the south by the Chemung Canal Feeder and north by lands of Edwin Meeks", but it also includes the small strip east of such premises once belonging to one Allard and late the property of Nicholas Mundy, and it also includes the land which reverted to Nicholas Mundy or his heirs upon the abandonment of the Chemung Canal Feeder and the highway bounding it on the north.

The premises herein described are shown on a map of lands belonging to the estate of Nicholas Mundy on which the thirty-six acres hereinbefore described are shown as the "Hill Lot", being the same premises which Simeon M. Hughson and wife and Mary F. Hughson by their deed dated the 5th of April, A. D., 1929, and recorded in Chemung and Steuben County Clerk's offices in Deed Book ..... page ..... granted and conveyed all their rights, title and interest unto Herbert B. Clover, Alfalfa For Sheep, Swine

Makes Best Pastures, Willman Says — Rape is Good Substitute.

A good stand of clover or alfalfa furnishes the best type of pasture for sheep and swine, says Professor J. P. Willman of the department of animal husbandry at Cornell University.

"Where these crops are not available for pasture in the state," he adds, "dwarf Essex rape has been found to be a satisfactory substitute.

"Rape is an annual which may be sown at corn-planting time, or even later. It furnishes grazing for sheep or swine from six to eight weeks after it is sown until it freezes in the fall. Rape grows well on many different kinds of soil, but does best on soil rather high in fertility.

"The seed cost to the acre is unusually low, and the seed is easily obtained. The seed should be well-prepared for best results.

"Dwarf Essex rape may be broadcast at the rate of eight to ten pounds to the acre," Professor Willman says. "Some persons prefer to sow mixtures of rape and oats, or rape, oats, and peas. One and one-half or two bushels of oats and six pounds of rape seed provides an excellent pasture. A mixture of one bushel of oats, one bushel of peas and six pounds of rape seed is also good.

"An acre of rape, or the mixtures mentioned should furnish enough pasture for twenty to twenty-five young pigs during the grazing season if they are fed, in addition, a good grain ration; or an acre will furnish 1400 to 1800 ewe-and-lamb days of grazing when properly handled."

Sixty Thousand Grown-ups in N. Y. City Are Back in School

Sixty thousand grown-ups have gone back to school in New York City to study everything from the three R's to sociology and fine arts.

Studies show that young married women with small children spend more time at work, they have less leisure time, and are therefore more often tired than are other women.

Mesquakie Indian fathers and mothers of the Tama Indian reservation in northern Oklahoma have formed a student-parent organization with aims similar to the parent-teacher's organization.

Besides regular physical and mental examinations, carefully planned meals, help with eating and with other routine habits, nursery school children at Cornell have chances for both free and supervised play with children of their own age.

A recent report states that ninety per cent of crimes and delinquencies of boys and girls who appeared in juvenile court or were sent to correctional institutions in one large city were traceable to books, magazines, and newspapers they had read and to movies they had seen.

Boys are now having their innings in a women's college: the New York state college of home economics recently published a bulletin, E-49, which tells the 4-H club boy how to select his clothes and to keep well-groomed. Single copies are sent free on request from the office of publication, Roberts Hall, Ithaca, New York.

scribe this whole thing is to say that it as a currency war conducted in secret and obscured by rigid censorship and propaganda. It is a war in which neither side can be victorious and can dictate to the other the terms of settlement. The British have managed their currency very successfully in the sense that they have maintained a stable price level in Great Britain. But they are able to manage it so successfully because they have the dollar and the franc fixed on gold as a base on which to operate. If France and the United States decide to manage their currencies as the British are managing theirs, there would be no fixed points and no country could manage its currency. On the other hand, the sterling bloc is so extensive and so powerful that only ruinous measures could conceivably force the British to stabilize on gold against their will.

It is a stalemate. Either side, the sterling countries on the one hand, France and the United States as gold countries on the other, can intensify the international chaos but neither can by its own action dictate the settlement. It is a stalemate which can be ended only in agreement.

The tragic aspect of the matter is that any reasonable agreement would remove most of the difficulties that are now regarded as obstacles to an agreement. It is like a traffic jam which becomes worse and worse because the British say traffic must move on the left side of the road and we say it must move on the right side. An agreement as to either side would move the traffic. So it is with the question as to whether the rate shall be $4.86 or less. If it is $4.86 we may have to deflate a little; if it is $4.60 we may have to deflatea little. But since stabilization at either rate with the French adhering at some reasonable rate for themselves, will end the hoarding of gold and cause gold prices to rise all over the world, a small disadvantage in the rate would be quickly surmounted. The competitive advantages to either country from one rate or another are trifling compared with the advantages to both of them from a rise in gold prices and a great increase in the volume of world trade.

Jasper Smothers Greenwood And Moves Into Class "C" Lead

Coach Beacom's Men Overwhelm Greenwood Representatives 17-6—Earl Walrath Fills in For Bobby Swan—Goings is Easy for Victors After Fourth Inning.

Jasper High climbed into first place in the western division of the County class "C" league Friday when they smothered Greenwood, 17-6. The local boys were in fine shape and, had they been on their own diamond, could have sent Greenwood to the showers easily. As it was they were without the services of their mound ace, Bobby Swan, and had to make good backing for first baseman, Earl Walrath, who took up the mound duties. However good backing and fine hitting gave Walrath an easy victory. A parade of Greenwood pitchers passed through the box, none of them able to hold down the hard hitting Jasperites. Walter Birmingham started on the mound and held Jasper to two hits and two runs in three innings. However a four run rally in the fourth and another in the fifth spelled his downfall and in the middle of the fifth he changed places with catcher McCaffery. McCaffery tried hard but a six run rally in the seventh sent him on his way. Little Joe Birmingham came in from right field to try to stem the tied but his first four pitches were returned in the form of one ball, one double and two singles. Walter Birmingham came back again and managed to set the next three men down without further damage.

Walrath pitched steadily and was never in trouble except when Greenwood forged ahead with a three run rally in the third. However the Jasper batters put him in the lead with a four run spree in the fourth and the going was easy for him thereafter. He kept nine hits well scattered over six innings and then gave way to let Jimmy Graham try his hand. Graham hit the first batter to oppose him and was touched for one hit. Otherwise he worked well.

The longest hit of the game was socked by Lewis, over the railroad tracks. This blow would have been good for a homer save for the ground rules which held Lewis to a double. The Jasper team performed like champions at bat, swinging deadly clubs at the offerings of all the Greenwood pitchers and taking advantage of bases on balls and errors to run up the count at various stages.

Owing to the short schedule this year, the local boys have but two more scheduled games to play. The boys are looking forward to another victory when they encounter Troupsburg next Friday. With Swan back in the line-up, they expect to bring home the bacon in a large way.

Cardinals Capture Hectic Exhibition Tilt From Aces, 12-11

Beacom Steps Into Jasper Hurling Breach and Holds Woodhull Hitters in Check for Five Innings, Then Falters—Hotaling and Drake Fling for Cards.

The Jasper Aces opened the current season in their usual manner here today when Woodhull captured the opener 12-11 after a hectic battle. None of the Aces regular hurlers were available for duty and the burden of the pitching fell on the shoulders of Beak Beacom, mentor of the high school team. Without having had any previous practice, Beacom took the mound and held the Woodhull batters hitless for five innings, but weakened in the later innings. Many errors also contributed to the Woodhull victory.

Olin struck out and K. Woodward made a marvelous bare-handed catch of Hotaling's long foul. R. Drake walked but Sanford speared Moore's drive to center. The Aces took off immediately when Van-Skiver singled, Munson let Beacom's grounder through him, Whipple struck out and Stone singled. Stone was forced at second on Woodward's grounder, scoring Van Skiver, Moore drove a long hit into deep left, scoring Beacom and Woodward but was tagged out trying to stretch it. Three runs.

Horton reached third on two errors and a long fly, Lewis and B. Drake popped up, Cady was hit by the pitcher and Munson grounded out. Schoonover scored on errors and T. Woodward reached third by the same route. Hotaling settled down and struck out three in a row. One run.

Woodhull went out in succession in the third and fourth innings, while Jasper added 3 runs.

Woodhull again dropped in 1-2-3 order.

Woodhull went out on four pitched balls. Beacom was working in fine shape and seemed headed for a shutout if not for a no-hit game. Moore grounded out to R. Drake. Schoonover was hit by the pitcher. T. Woodward grounded out. Schoonover scored on Sanford's single but Sanford was caught trying to steal second. One run.

Olin reached second in the sixth when K. Woodward muffled his fly to left, scoring on Hotaling's double. R. Drake grounded to Stone, and Stone hit Hotaling in the head trying to catch him at third. Hotaling scored and Drake went to second. Moore grounded out but Horton singled, scoring Drake. Lewis grounded out. B. Drake walked and scored on Elliott's single. Elliott was caught between second and third to retire the side. Five runs for Woodhull.

Jasper came back strong in their half of the inning. Van Skiver doubled and was caught at third on Beacom's grounder. Whipple and Stone singled. K. Woodward popped up to Elliott and Moore drove a liner through R. Drake to score Stone and Whipple. Elliott bobbled Schoonover's drive but T. Woodward popped up to Hargrave, three runs.

Hargrave struck out to start Woodhull's seventh; Olin rapped a long drive into left but was tagged out at second on K. Woodward's peg in . Hotaling singled and scored on R. Drake's single. Moore collected his only hit of the day when he drove a double into left. Everyone was safe on Horton's grounder. Maggs, now playing for Lewis put out a fly to K. Woodward. Two runs. Jasper went down in 1-2-3 order. This was the first inning that Jasper failed to score.

B. Drake reached first on Stone's error and scored on Elliott's drive to left. Elliott was caught on K. Woodward's unerring peg to second and Hargrave struck out. Olin walked but Hotaling struck out. One run.

R. Drake singled. Moore struck out, Horton reached first on Stone's error. Maggs rapped a long fly to Woodward. B. Drake walked and Captain Bob Elliott won the game for his team with a blasting triple to deep right field scoring three runs and knotting the score. Elliott won the game when he scored on Beacom's error of Hargave's grounder. Olin put a fly out to Stone to retire the side. Four runs.

A very large crowd attended the game. The grounds were packed and cars were parked along the road for a great distance.

The Aces were quite irritated at their loss and expect to take it out on Austinburg when they invade that town next Sunday for their first league game of the season.

Knights Emerge From Hornell Conquest Into Three-way Struggle For Steuben Class-A Leadership

Lefty Flynn, Hurling Ace of Hewson Staff, Thwarts Pennant Aspirations of Maple City Clan—Hits by Beers, Hallett, Robbins, Matthews Prdouce Three Runs—Gillespie in Stellar Fielding Role.

With Lefty Flynn pitching airtight ball and a clouting punch in evidence when hits were needed to push over runs, the Addison High School checked the onrush of the Hornell High School nine toward the Steuben County pennant on the Hornell diamond last Friday afternoon, 4 to 3. The outcome threw the league leaders into a three-way scramble between Hornell, Addison and Corning Northside.

Flynn pitched one of the greatest games of his high school career and easily retrieved whatever lost glory may have resulted from the collapse of the Knights in their opening encounter against the Haverling combine two weeks ago Lefty had excellent control and besides holding the Maples to a scanty four hits, he sent eight of them back to the bench after vain swings into space.

The Knights scored three runs in the third on hits by Beers, Hallet, Robbins and Matthews. Safeties by Larry Gradner and Joe Dominick added another in the sixth. A flashy running catch by Rokenbroad saved the day for the Hornell pitcher on another occasion.

Don Gillespie, in left field for Addison, turned in one of the season's great plays when he lifted a hard drive from his shoe tops after a brilliant dash to get in front of the ball.

Ralph Wade, Recruit Southpaw, Whiffs Three Successive Batsmen With Bags Choked in Ninth

Smokey Joe Hopper, Another of O'Keefe's Rookies, Sets Opponents Down With One Hit in First Five Innings — Armstrong and Hewson Are Fielding Stars.

Going into the first half of the ninth with Addison leading 5-4, in the opening game of the home season against Lawrenceville last Sunday at Tuscarora Field, Ralph Wade, a late addition to Manager O'Keefe's newly-recruited stable of boxmen, saw the bases quickly choked through errors of commission and omission behind him. Then instead of wilting under fire, this courageous young southpaw took matters into his own hands. Stepping back to the rubber, he retired the next three batters via the strike-out route, thereby saving the day for the home boys and incidentally thrilling the large opening day turnout of fans with a spectacular feat seldom witnessed on any diamond.

Smokey Joe Hopper, former high school speed merchant, took up the pitching assignment at the start of the fray and limited the visiting batters to one run in the first five innings. Joe was in excellent form and on the basis of his showing Sunday, there is plenty of trouble in store during the weeks ahead for other teams in the Tri-County loop. Lacking practice, however, he tired toward the end of the game and gave way to Wade in the seventh.

Ken Armstrong in left field, made one of the outstanding catches of the day when he raced far back into the "home run" sector to pull down a drive which had all the earmarks of a sure score for Lawrenceville. John Grange, who has been revamped into first baseman since the passing of Pop Riker, was one of the hitting stars of the day for the home team along with Dick Hovey and Blazer Hadlock. Wendell Hewson, at the midway station made a spectacular stop of a bullet-like drive over second for another of the afternoon's fielding gems.

George LaChance, backstop of two seasons ago, was again in Addison colors after a twelve-month hitch with the CCC, far down in Tenessee. George made several excellent stops which revealed that he is still able to dig them out of the dirt.

Let me say right here that the mighty polysyllable given above is a correct and well established denomination of science; and may be found in Merck's Index of Chemistry, page 286, Edition of 1907. That all the other chemical names given in this contest, whether given by me or by others, are to be found in the same book.

This is not a fake deal in any sense. Get that straight!

—E.H.C.

Wow, 60 letters, a tie, with Messrs. Maguire and Chase running neck and neck! As Graham McNamee would say,—what a race!!

Then at the last turn the vivacious Emery lengthens his stride, he shows his heels to the pack. He's tearing toward the tape with all the big word records crumbling before him. Trailing into the distance comes as talented a field of big word pacers as ever stepped onto a track. If only he doesn't stumble, or lose his glasses—he's up to 72 letters, 76, 77, 78—he's over AT 78 LETTERS!

Follow him now, this modern Pegasus, in his amazing finish, the like of which has never been seen at Churchill Downs.

Big Word Derby
Addison Advertiser
Gentlemen:

THE BIG WORD—78 letters, beat it if you can!

Hottentottenstruttertrottelmutterattentaterlattengitterwetterkotterbeutelratte.

Here's a LITTLE STORY regarding a BIG WORD:

Among the Hottentots (in German Hottentotten) many marsupials are found. The works on natural history do not reveal this fact, but the story is as good as if they did.

When the marsupials are caught they are put into a cage, there known as kotter, provided with a cover to keep out the rain (the cover is called in German lattengitter). The cage then becomes known as littengitterwetter kotter, and the marsupial, after his imprisonment in one of them, is a lattengitterwetterkotterbeutelratte.

One day an assassin (in German attentater) was arrested for an attempt on the life of a Hottentot woman, the mother of two stuttering and stupid children, who was called, on this account, Hottentottenstruttertottelmutter. The malefactor was confined in a marsupial's cage, whence he escaped. He was recaptured by a Hottentot, who put him in a safe place, and came to the chief of the nearest German South African Station and said, with beaming eyes, for he thought he had mastered the German tongue:

"I have captured the beutelratte!"

"What beutelratte?" asked the chief. "We have several."

"The attentaterlattengitterwetterkotter beutelratte."

"But of which attentater are you speaking?"

"Of the Hottentottenstruttertrottelmutterattentater."

"Ah! Then why do you not at once say the Hottentottenstruttertrottelmutterrattentaterlattengitterwetterkotterbeutelratte?"

Whereupon and naturally the Hottentot fled in dismay.

What words we've had in this most unusual contest!

Oh, these words they beat the French, the Jew—
They beat the Dutch and Irish too!
So now, to you "Good Luck" from me
Thru Big Word Derby!—E.H.C.

But, look; Unnoticed almost a horse of darkest hue has flashed over the line. There is a roar from the stands—he wins — he doesn't win—Emery wins—he doesn't win—The officials say that—ROSCOE WINS—at 81, by the stopwatch.

Here's the record—

This club is located in Vienna and the name contains 81 letters. For verification consult Robert (Believe-it-or-Not) Ripley. I may not win the contest but this word had ought to make it more difficult for the one who does.

Yours truly,

Here, too, comes another thrill. Arlington Smith of Ellsmere, races in at 64—

Elsmere, N. Y.
May 18, 1935

Editor Addison Advertiser
Addison, N. Y.
Dear Sir:

For your long-word contest, you may consider the name of a Sultan of Djocjockarte, a town in central Java, Dutch East Indies. The gentleman's name, as follows, contains 64 letters: Hamengkoeboewonosenopaitingalgongabgurrachmansaydinpanotagomodev.

The Sultan's power is nominal, since he is subject to the Dutch Resident, but he is still the sovereign lord of the land, and derives revenues therefrom for himself. This is the only part of Java which still maintains any semblance of native rule, and where the manners and customs of the early Javanese people are preserved.

Very truly,
Arlington Smith

What's this—a dead heat—three others over the line—clicked at 60.

They are James Maguire of Jasper, "A Rathbonite", and Eleanor Ten Broeck of Woodhull, each of whom sent in the same word.

And still they come—fighting for position, Mrs. Margaret M. Wilson of Cameron Mills, 59; two collegians, Curtis Taylor and Douglas Hand, of Duke and Alfred, respectively, at 58; Willis R. Perry, 56; George J. Kilroy, 54; "Woodhullite" and "Twenty Grand" 53; George Northrup, 45— and now—the crowd is leaving—the race is over.

Cagney Learns to Drive Truck Like Expert For Films

Although James Cagney had followed many occupations during his colorful career, he had never been a truck-driver until Warner Bros. decided to star him in "The St. Louis Kid", which comes to the Avon Theatre at the mid-night show Saturday, also Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Among other jobs that Jimmy held before he became an actor, he was an office boy on a New York newspaper, a bundle wrapper in a department store, a bell-hop and a newspaper cartoonist. In the show business he has been everything from an electrician to a chorus man.

But driving a truck was one of the toughest jobs that Cagney ever encountered.

Driving a ten-ton truck is quite different from Driving a touring car ,Jimmy points out. A truck is much heavier, of course, and there's much more to driving one than merely steering the wheels.

The picture is filled with thrills, romance and rollicking comedy in which Cagney gets into more trouble than he has ever been in before. Jimmy not only uses his rough tactics on the male population, but he tames his leading lady, Patricia Ellis, as well as rescuing her from a band of gorillas.

Others in the cast include Allen Jenkins, Robert Barrat, Hobart Cavanaugh, Spencer Charters, Addison Richards and Dorothy Dare. Ray Enright directed the picture from the screen play by Warren Duff and Seton I. Miller, based on a story by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan.

It will pass through many hands and sometimes requires as many as twelve different clerical operations which with postage and stationery, entail an expense to the bank.

In order that the bank may be reimbursed for many of these operations and other services, most customers maintain a balance large enough to keep the bank from shouldering a loss. Adequate bank balances insure a square deal to you and to your bank.
